

English Teacher

Trinity is seeking a full-time instructor for English. High School teaching experience and a master's in literature or teaching is strongly preferred.

The Trinity English curriculum begins in 8th and 9th grades with a unique reading and writing workshop approach that builds higher level reading, writing and analysis skills from the beginning. In the upper grades, students have opportunities to study world literature, write in a variety of modes and hone essential research skills. Our IB program, available in 11th and 12th grades, challenges students as critical readers and writers. AP Language and several English electives are also available in our dynamic, student-centered curriculum.

The ideal candidate:

- develops student experiences in reading and writing in a rich and engaging way
- models reflective practice, adjusting as required to support student performance
- creates a classroom environment centered on the needs and skills of individual learners
- demonstrates a knowledge base of global literature from the canon as well as more contemporary works
- has a firm understanding of the cognitive development and needs of students from grades 8 through 12
- deploys multiple instructional strategies and means of assessment, allowing students to understand their own growth
- communicates clearly, fostering partnerships with parents and colleagues
- integrates technology in the classroom
- enjoys collaboration with other educators
- values continual professional growth

Interested candidates should submit electronic copies of resume and cover letter to Lee Sprague, Head of Faculty Life, at lsprague@trinityes.org. Additionally, send (email or mail) copies of transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate coursework.
