

Poem

By Elizabeth Bishop

- It must be Nova Scotia; only there does one see gabled wooden houses
painted that awful shade of brown.
The other houses, the bits that show, are white.
- 5 Elm trees, low hills, a thin church steeple
-that gray-blue wisp-or is it? In the foreground
a water meadow with some tiny cows,
two brushstrokes each, but confidently cows;
two minuscule white geese in the blue water,
back-to-back, feeding, and a slanting stick.
- 10 Up closer, a wild iris, white and yellow,
fresh-squiggled from the tube.
The air is fresh and cold; cold early spring
clear as gray glass; a half inch of blue sky
below the steel-gray storm clouds.
- 15 (They were the artist's specialty.)
A specklike bird is flying to the left.
Or is it a flyspeck looking like a bird?
- Heavens, I recognize the place, I know it!
It's behind-I can almost remember the farmer's name.
- 20 His barn backed on that meadow. There it is,
titanium white, one dab. The hint of steeple,
filaments of brush-hairs, barely there,
must be the Presbyterian church.
Would that be Miss Gillespie's house?
- 25 Those particular geese and cows
are naturally before my time.
- A sketch done in an hour, "in one breath,"
once taken from a trunk and handed over.
Would you like this? I'll probably never
- 30 have room to hang these things again.
Your Uncle George, no, mine, my Uncle George,
he'd be your great-uncle, left them all with Mother
when he went back to England.
You know, he was quite famous, an R.A....
- 35 I never knew him. We both knew this place, apparently, this literal small backwater,
looked at it long enough to memorize it,
our years apart. How strange. And it's still loved,
or its memory is (it must have changed a lot).

40 Our visions coincided-"visions" is too serious a word-our looks, two looks:
art "copying from life" and life itself,
life and the memory of it so compressed they've turned into each other. Which is which?
